Even if you've ponied up for a roadside assistance plan, your car is a wise place to keep an assortment of handy just-in-case items. For instance, toting something like a jump starter can make short work of minor breakdowns, while products like a seatbelt cutter can make even dire emergencies survivable.

Today, if a young person calls somebody and it goes to voicemail, they'll just hang up. And if it's urgent, they'll send a text. But old people don't see the point of this. If they have something to tell you, they'll leave a long—and yes, maybe rambling—message on your voicemail. And they expect you to listen to all of it!
